

Quantum Resonance

NEWSLETTER:

Well things here at QR land is a bit upside down with our "new" frequency generator which is worse than a colic baby. With small little things just cropping up that delay our production of most of our instruments. But there is light in the tunnel (long tunnel dark one) and we should be up and running again in the first week of May. That is enough complaining back to the good stuff.

Please visit our website for the updates to our equipment.

As I said in our previous newsletter we need to spend a bit more time explaining how the radionics rate work.

Now there are three basic components in the rate, no the numbers is not one of them. First up I need you to for now ignore standard physics, or if you can standard anatomy what I want to explain may not strict fit into any of these categories.

When I think of the human body I always get this picture of the Duracell bunny. We are actually like a battery with a positive and a negative, I know a lot of people that is so negative that they are actually positive. Which boil down to a whole polarity dilemma, which bring me to the point of trying to explaining how a rate work.

In our previous issue I had show how a linear line is disrupt to form a ripple or wave pattern. This pattern actually form a three dimensional symbol which when inverted 180 deg will form a perfect mirror image of the substance that we want to create. May it be an organ or a health condition, the reason for the inversion is that when a "signature" is introduce into the body and it is not inverted the body will not absorb it.

If I can explain as follow if I have a glass of water and add more water to it the only change that occur is that the glass is now fuller. There is no change to the water that were already in the glass, now let us say that the color red represent the inversion part. Then adding the color to the glass would turn everything red, that then have an impact on the outcome.

Back to the rate explanation we said there are three things that when combine will form a rate. First is resistance follow by current and top up by conductivity, for a rate to be active all three these components need to be combine and work together.

Let us look at a wave form it can be describe as having resistance due to the ripple effect that is created, it can also be explain as forcing water through a restriction the restriction will create pressure or then resistance. The fluctuation within this wave pattern will create a current, the combination of the resistance and current create volts which is needed to charge the Duracell bunnies battery. The last component is conductivity, for something to be conductive it need electrolytes. Since our bodies are made up of $\pm 70\%$ water we have no short supply of electrolytes. I had been adopt the habit of giving my clients (victims as some call it) a glass of water to drink before we do a healing session.

To take this a step further, if we look at the ripple that we create when we dial up a rate on the machine. We could or is it should see that this ripple have high and low points. These points can thus be seen as either positive or negative, the next wonderful thing that happen is that when it get inverted by 180 deg the positive and negative points swap around.

Allow me to explain this fantastic phenomenon by example of two magnets we all know that opposite poles attract and like poles push away. Ever think about the idea that when you use a compass that when you heading north you sort off going south. Since it is the south pole of the compass needle that point north, well I am sure you get the idea. The inverted pattern will then attach it self to the opposite partner with in the body, almost like a hand in a glove. It is within this "bridging" effect that the energy flow is corrected or as it is often been describes as entrainment.

For the more scientific incline person that going to say but positive and negative cannot attach well remember when I said don't think like a scientist right well now is the time for that. Remember we are not talking of polarity in the same sense as electrical power but of a subtle nature. If you place your thumb and index finger together you do not get a shock right? And yet your thumb is positive and your index finger is negative, there will be a flow of energy between positive and negative in proportion to the energy in the body. If you have two batteries one is fully charge and the other one is low, if you connect these batteries the power will be equally distribute between both batteries. Thus if after awhile you measure each battery the will have the same voltage. This means that energy had flow from the full battery to the low one and the then equal out. This is what happen when a rate is introduce to a organ or body structure.

So as you can see the rate is not just a bunch of numbers it is an energetic signature created by the dials for the correction of disharmony within our bodies, by applying the three basic components. By lacking any one of these three components we compromise the healing effect.

I maybe need to point out the obvious and that is that each cell, organ or body system have is own unique vibrational signature.

For those of you wonderful people out there that made back somersaults about my abuse of the laws of physics. Get over it because this is no ordinary science this is Radionics that follow a much more powerful law and that is the law of metaphysics.

Well I hope my poor attempt to explain something really powerful make some sense.

In our next newsletter, I want to look at the most powerful law in Radionics and that is the law of intend.

Until then happy healings.....

Greetings
